THE GARDEN GLADIOLUS

SOUBRETTE

1925

THOMAS M. PROCTOR

129 South Street
WRENTHAM, MASS.

FOREWORD

The gladiolus is pre-eminently a cut-flower: its long-keeping qualities, combined with its beauty and variety of form and color, adapt it to use in almost any situation where flowers can be used.

The large-flowering types for the large vase or jardiniere, with the dainty small-flowered Primulinus Hybrids for the place that needs just a little color, and between these the other types,—there is a place for all of them, whether on the dining table, mantel or porch; in a large vase on the floor, or a bowl on the piano.

The gladiolus is adaptable—try it.

CULTURAL NOTES

Your gladiolus garden should be exposed to full sunshine. The soil must be good, preferably a sandy loam, and should be well prepared.

PLANTING. Plant bulbs six inches deep, from May 1 to July 1, covering only three inches until the sprouts are up. Deep planting helps to keep the stalks erect, and the roots are down nearer the moisture. Stable dressing broadcasted, with a little fertilizer in the row, is probably the best method of feeding.

CULTIVATION. Keep the ground stirred, and the weeds out. Watering is seldom necessary, but if you water, do it thoroughly.

FLOWERING SEASON. From planting to blooming takes from 60 to 100 days, according to variety, and you can prolong the season by making several plantings about three weeks apart.

Cut stems with a sharp knife, leaving three or four leaves for the maturing of the bulb.

Remove faded flowers each day, trim the stems, and give fresh water, and your flowers will last a week or more, and even then the tips of the spikes can be used with good effect in a broad low bowl.

DIGGING AND STORING. When the leaves have turned brown the bulbs should be dug. Cut the tops close, and store the bulbs, after drying, in shallow boxes or in paper bags, safe from frost or dampness. The old dried-up bulb can be removed at any time.

There are no mysteries connected with gladiolus growing, and there are no very serious insect pests or diseases to contend with, so that even a beginner can be a successful grower, and is sure, later, to become an enthusiast.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

All stock offered subject to prior sale. As the supply of some varieties is limited it is advisable to order early, although orders are not delivered until April unless wanted earlier.

Remittance should accompany the order. Unpaid orders reserved to April 1 if a deposit of 25% is made. Stamps accepted for amounts up to $1.00.

Prices quoted, unless noted otherwise, include delivery, in this country, on all orders amounting to $1.00 or more. Six of a kind at the dozen rate; single bulbs at one-tenth the dozen price.

Mistakes may occur, but we do not substitute. We believe our stock to be 100% true, and all of first quality, and will do our best to adjust any cause for complaint, either by replacement or refund; but we do not guarantee the results of your planting, or assume any responsibility not plainly stated above.

EARLY ORDERS. 15% additional stock may be selected on any prepaid January order, except for Special Offers and Mixtures; and 10% on all similar February orders.
